When does a course change need to be accompanied by a Change to Program proposal?

There will be times when changes are made to courses that affect existing programs, other times proposed course changes do not need to be accompanied by a Change to Program Name, Requirements or Policies proposal. Here is a helpful guide to know which proposals are needed to correctly document the changes you would like to make regarding your department's courses or programs:

Submit a Change to Existing Program form when:

- adding a new course to any area of the program of study
- removing an existing course from the program of study without discontinuing the course
- making changes to the total credit hours awarded by a course
- discontinuing a course currently listed in the program of study
- moving a course from one area to another within the program of study

No Change to Existing Program form is needed when:

- making changes to an existing course, including prefix, number, title, prerequisites, corequisites, or course description, so long as those changes do not change the course's location within the program of study
- creating new courses that will not be listed explicitly in the program of study, either as a requirement or prerequisites or electives
